The Microwave International New Media Arts Festival is the largest event of its kind in Hong Kong. The 2011 edition takes "Alchemy" as an overarching theme and showcases works by several media arts laboratories that are pioneers in their field. The selected laboratories for this year include Ishikawa Oku Laboratory from the University of Tokyo in Japan, Lighthouse from the UK, robotlab from Germany, Time's Up from Austria. Together in the main exhibition, they explore themes such as kinetic experiments, digital culture, robotic intelligence, nanotechnology, and augmented reality. A satellite show, conference, artist symposium, workshops, and public screenings are also part of the event's programme. The event acts as an exchange and dialogue platform between artists, professionals and the general public, and also promotes Hong Kong artists to international institutions and curators. As an organisation, Microwave seeks to nurture a rising local new media arts community, through various programmes such as educational workshops, seminars, forums and exhibitions. This event is supported by Hong Kong's Leisure and Culture Service Department and Hong Kong Arts Development Council. See Programme Schedule
