Over 12 days, FCP 2013

will move from Yangon to Mandalay, engaging with local communities of artists, activists, cultural workers, starting with the Art of Freedom Film Festival. Into its second year, the festival aims to broaden the essence and concept of freedom among the peoples of Myanmar through film as a medium. The FCP artists will also engage in two days of keynote addresses by Myanmar public intellectuals on issues of environment, education, feminism, digital media and the new Myanmar. During their stay in Yangon and Mandalay, the FCP artists will encounter many independent artists including Theatre of the Disturbed, the Wathann Film Festival, the Art & Museum Project: Mingon Museum of Contemporary Art, and Gitameit. In 2007, FCP worked on mobilising arts communities in Ho Chi Minh City while in 2009 / 2010, FCP created Alter U (short for Alternate Universities) in Phnom Penh and Siem Reap. FCP 2013 takes place in Myanmar (Yangon and Mandalay), bringing together Myanmar and non-Myanmar artists from various disciplines like performance, film and visual arts. Through performance-lectures, presentations and screenings, the artists will share their individual practice. The public is invited to these daily presentations at the French Institute.
