Ethics and Participatory Art - Gulbenkian Foundation publication

Ethics and Participatory Art is the first edition of the “Art and Community Notebooks” collection, published by the Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation in Lisbon. It is aimed at reflecting on the importance and complexity of ethics in arts practice for social transformation. The free download publication is available in English and Portuguese.

Two interlocutors with decades of experience in the participatory arts share their views: writer, cultural activist and visual artist Arlene Goldbard, who lives in the US, and writer, researcher and community artist

François Matarasso, author of the book entitled A Restless Art (published by the Gulbenkian Foundation in 2019).

The Notebooks, available in Portuguese and English in digital format and free of charge, begins with an introductory essay by Matarasso entitled A Preliminary Reflection on the Arts, Social Transformation and Ethics. This is followed by a dialogue between the two writers, adapted and based on an online conversation about the ethics of participatory art held on 29 January 2021 that involved almost one hundred participants from the projects developed under the PARTIS initiatives led by the Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation. The third and final chapter shares a guide for the workshops on the ethics of participatory art that Arlene Goldbard has offered in the United States for several years.
