Institut Lumiere

Since 1982, the Institut Lumière has had its home in the heart of Monplaisir, that historical area of Lyon where the Lumière brothers invented the Cinématographe and where, in 1895, they shot the first film in the history of the cinema : Sortie d'Usine. Concurrently, a place of reminiscence and a film theater, the Institut is a genuine Living Museum of the Cinema. Films are screened, directors are invited, exhibitions are organized, young viewers are educated within these walls. Its double vocation embodies heritage conservation - films, books, photos, posters, pre-cinematographic and cinematographic equipment - and publicity-related artistic activities - film screenings, exhibitions, publication, education and training.
